Sparking the imagination of thousands

Before the Careers Fair – Inspiration

Aims

- To broaden your understanding of the range of roles and jobs available by exploring the variety of career opportunities
- To identify skills and qualities used in jobs and to recognise their importance in achieving success.
- Identify your own skills and qualities
- To recognise that skills are transferrable.
- To reflect on link between others experiences whether personally known to you or not, and your own life.

Is there anything they have in common?

Who is your role model?

A role model is someone who leads and inspires those around them and takes them in the right direction. Think of someone you admire, whose skills and qualities you would like to have and who has achieved success in their life and work. How did they get to where they are today and what can they teach you about choosing the right career?

Imagine the 3 boards above...

- On the first write the name of your role model; what their job is and why you admire them...remember to consider the skills and qualities they have. What makes them successful in your eyes?
- On the second write down the skills and qualities you share with your role model... Can you add an example of somewhere where you use them?
- On the third write down the skills and qualities your role model has that you need to develop further. Can you think of some ways in which you might do this? Who could help?

Refer to your Employability Skills and Key Qualities sheets.

What would you put in a diagram like the one below?
